In case of Illness or Injury

Key Points

- ① There are two types of medical institutions in Japan: smaller-scale 'clinics' or SHINRYO-JO, and larger-scale 'hospitals' or BYOIN.
- ② If you anticipate difficulty in explaining your symptoms to the doctor in Japanese, it may be best to come along with an interpreter.

■ Consulting a medical doctor

Topic	Information
SHINRYO-JO (A clinic, or a small scale hospital)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● It is recommended to have a clinic as your family doctor to consult about your family's general health condition in your neighborhood. ● SHINRYO-JO may not be able to perform major surgeries.
BYOIN (Hospitals)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● General hospitals are usually equipped with facilities to cover all the major treatment fields including surgeries. ● You may have to wait long for your turn as a number of patients come for consultation at the general hospital. ● Medical fees may be more expensive without a referral from your primary care doctor or other medical doctors.
What to bring for medical consultations	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Your health insurance certificate (card) ● Cash ● Your residence card, driving license or other ID

Disaster Preparedness in Community

Key Points

- ① Communicate regularly with your neighbors.
- ② Take part in disaster drills conducted in the community.

■ Preparation we can do in the community

Topic	Tips/Information
Exchange among residents	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Helping each other among neighbors is important at the time of an earthquake or a flood. Therefore, it will be good to greet to your neighbors and have a good relationship with them. ● Ogaki International Exchange Association (☎0584-82-2311) occasionally hold events to promote exchanges between foreign residents and local Japanese residents.
Disaster Preparedness Drill	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● In Japan, disaster preparedness drills are occasionally held in communities for residents to learn what to do at times of sudden earthquake or flood. Ask, the president of JICHI-KAI, the residents' association of your area for information regarding disaster preparedness drills.

Actions to Take in the Event of a Disaster

Key Points

【When an earthquake strikes】

① Keep yourself safe.

Stay under a sturdy desk or table and wait until the quake subsides.

② Turn off open flames and shut the main gas valve.

After the quake subsides, turn off the cooking stove, gas burner, fan heater, and main gas valve. Unplug electrical appliances.

③ Secure an exit.

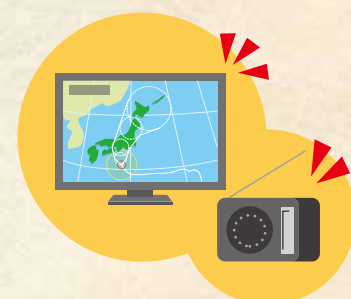

Open the entrance door and windows to secure an exit.

【When a flooding occurs】

① Get updates from the TV, Internet.

Pay special attention to the latest track for the typhoon, the amount of rainfall.

② When an evacuation advisory is issued, take action immediately.

As soon as evacuation instructions are announced in your area, take an emergency bag (page 9) and go to the evacuation center.

10 At the Evacuation Centers

Key Points

- ① Evacuation centers in times of disaster are maintained by the evacuees' mutual cooperation.

- ② Help each other to distribute food and drinks, and keeping the environment clean.

- ③ Food, drinks, blankets and other relief supplies should be distributed to everyone. Be aware that public assistance takes time.

- ④ Pay attention to social etiquette where evacuees gather so that everyone can rest well and stay calm.

- ⑤ Do not be misled by rumors. Confirm information with your family, people in your community, or with the city officials.

Ogaki's Festivals and Events

【Ogaki Festival】

This festival has a 370-year tradition and is a representative event of the castle town OGAKI. Thirteen colorful floats parade through the city center to the accompaniment of flutes and drums, performances using string puppets, called KARAKURI, children's dances and other entertainments.

At night, the lanterns that light up the floats provide a fantastic sight for spectators to enjoy.

The festival was registered as a UNESCO Intangible Cultural Heritage in 2016.

The Ogaki Festival is held on the Saturday and Sunday immediately preceding 15 May every year.
